1. The Council of Ministers directly or indirectly controls all construction activity in the U.S.S.R.
2. The Ministry of Construction is directly subordinate to the Council of Ministers of the U.S.S.R. It has a number of subordinate Main Administrations charged with various types of construction activity, such as, construction for the metallurgical and chemical industries, construction of roads, bridges and various manufacturing plants.
3. Subordinate to the Council of Ministers of the U.S.S.R. there are at least nine other ministries, such as the Ministries of Fuel, Oil, Defense, etc. which are engaged in activities connected with the Soviet Economy.
4. Each of these nine Economic Ministries control at least one subordinate main administration which is responsible for construction activity of a type related to the activity of its parent organization. These main administrations report through their Ministries to the Council of Ministries.
5. Attached directly to the Council of Ministers of the U.S.S.R. are a number of independent main administrations, such as, the main administrations of food reserves and of material reserves.
6. Some of these Main Administrations have subordinate construction trusts, which perform construction work required by their parent organization.
7. Subordinate to the Council of Ministers of the U.S.S.R. are a number of Union-Republic Ministries. These Union Republic Ministries also work through Republic Councils of Ministries.
8. Subordinate to at least four of the Union Republic Council of Ministers are a series of construction main administrations and other construction organizations. These construction organizations report through their ministries either to the Council of Ministers of the U.S.S.R., or to the Republic Council of Ministers, or to both.
9. In addition to the above construction organizations, there are a number of construction trusts or other organizations which are directly responsible to the Council of Ministers (example: housing, research plants, great projects, etc.)
10. Such organizations as Local Soviets, Oblast and Republic Governments, Industrial and Producers Cooperatives, Manufacturing Factories, etc. have subordinate construction organizations of the U.S.S.R.
11. Attached directly to the Council of Ministers of the U.S.S.R. is a State Committee for Construction Affairs. This committee probably advises the Council of Ministers on such matters as construction standards, norms, etc. It may have some direct influence over the various construction organizations.
